TRACK DESCRIPTION

This track welcomes contributions on corporate misconduct and organizational wrongdoing, namely conduct in or by organizations that violates legal, ethical, or social norms, in the digital and green transition. This track encourages studies on practices of increasing severity, from ESG decoupling and earnings management to corruption, financial reporting fraud, and organized crime infiltration of legitimate businesses. This track particularly welcomes research on the organizational, financial, and institutional conditions that foster such practices, and on how they emerge, spread, and affect firms, stakeholders, markets, and communities. This track also invites work on how technological, environmental, and geopolitical transformations and economic shocks reshape risks and their detection. Governance, financial, and institutional responses strengthening prevention and resilience in local and global entrepreneurial ecosystems are of specific interest. Theoretical, empirical, and interdisciplinary approaches are all in scope.
