TRACK DESCRIPTION

This track welcomes contributions on regulation, compliance, and risk governance in banks, other financial intermediaries, and non-financial firms facing the twin digital and green transition. This track encourages studies on supervisory regulation and enforcement, compliance architecture, risk culture, internal controls, and financial and non-financial reporting. This track particularly welcomes research on sanctions, including the design and proportionality of penalties, disclosure of violations, reputational effects, deterrence, compliance costs, and spillovers to non-sanctioned entities. This track also invites work on RegTech and SupTech, AI governance and algorithmic credit decisions, operational and cyber resilience, greenwashing, sustainable lending, climate-risk management, and ESG data quality. Bank-, borrower-, firm-, market-level, and cross-country analyses, as well as evidence on how regulatory requirements affect the financing and competitiveness of SMEs, are of specific interest. Theoretical, empirical, and interdisciplinary approaches are all in scope.
